

MRS. GEO. OGDEN DIES SUDDENLY

Was Ill But a Few Hours When Death
Called Her to Her Reward

The death of Mrs. George Ogden, which occurred last Thursday night was one of the most sudden and unlooked for events ever experienced here.

She was in her usual health on Wednesday and attended choir practise at the Second ward that night, of which body she was an energetic member. She returned to her home and was taken ill during the night, but the illness was considered slight.

On Thursday forenoon she suffered from a severe pain in her head. During the early afternoon it increased in violence and shortly after 3 o'clock she lapsed into unconsciousness and in spite of the best medical attention she succumbed to cerebral hemorrhage shortly after 5 o'clock.

Dr. Gledhill, Dr. Steiner and Dr. Neill were in attendance for hours and kept her alive with oxygen for several hours but the disease was beyond their reach. Her friends and relatives were greatly shocked at the news of her death.

Mrs. Lizzie Nelson Ogden was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson and was born at Moroni 20 years ago. She moved to Richfield with her parents about 11 years ago and four years later she was married to George Ogden. Their married life was one of happiness, and three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Ogden went to New York where both worked faithfully in the mission field there. They returned about a year ago and since that time they had made a substantial addition to their cosy home on First West street. Mrs. Ogden was particularly happy over her home and had planned interior adornment which would make of it a little palace.

No children came to her, but with Mr. Ogden she lived a useful and happy life. She was a member of the state board of M. I. A. workers, and was an energetic member of the tabernacle and Second ward choirs. She loved music and took much delight in her choir work. She was one of the most useful members of her ward and was always ready and willing to perform any duty when called upon.

Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon at the tabernacle. The carpet was literally covered with floral offerings. There were beautiful pieces given by the choirs and by the associations of which she was a member.

Bishop Virginius Dean of the Second ward conducted the services. The lower floor of the tabernacle was nearly filled by the large audience of friends and relatives. The music for the services was furnished by the tabernacle choir and the following selections were rendered: "Jesus, lover of my Soul," "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," Mrs. A. W. Bird and choir, "The Angel", a beautiful ladies' chorus given by eight voices, "Seek Relief in Prayer," by a mixed quartette, and the ever beautiful intermezzo from "Cavalleria Rusticana" by the choir.

The speakers were J. M. Peterson and R. D. Young of the Stake presidency and Miss Emma Christensen of the M. I. A. state board. Mr. Peterson told in a most sympathetic and convincing manner of the life and death of the speaker.

er's children From this he drew the lesson of kindness that should be a dominant feature in everyone's life. He read two poems from the pen of Ella Wheeler Wilcox and altogether gave a beautiful and comforting address

President Young and Miss Christensen told of the beautiful character of the deceased and of her faithfulness in religious work Both paid glowing tributes to her memory

Resolutions adopted by the Seventies quorum and by the state board of the M. I. A. were read ¶ Leonard Ogden read, as of the sentiments of the father of the deceased, Andrew Nelson, Ingersoll's address delivered at the tier of his dead brother.

Benediction was pronounced by John Ross, after which friends and relatives were permitted to view the remains Interment was in the city cemetery and a long cortege followed the remains to their last resting place
